

Seller Outreach Text Templates

SECTION 01

Why These Read as Follow-Ups

The framing of these templates as "follow-ups" is not about pretending we've spoken with someone we haven't. It is about how modern SMS platforms and cell carriers filter messages.

Twilio, along with Verizon, AT&T, and T-Mobile, aggressively flags and blocks messages that read as cold marketing to consumers. Anything with words like "cash," "offer," "sell," or "buy" in the opener, or that sounds like a mass promotional blast, gets deprioritized or dropped entirely, even to sellers who would genuinely be interested in what we do.

Framing our outreach as a professional check-in on a property, which is exactly what it is since we have the parcel in our records as a lead, keeps deliverability high and lets our messages actually land in front of the seller.

IF A SELLER SAYS "WE HAVEN'T SPOKEN BEFORE"

"You're right, we haven't — apologies for the phrasing. I have <propertyAddress> in my records as a well situated lot in the area and was reaching out to see if you had any plans for it. Are you still the owner?"

That reframes the conversation truthfully and keeps the door open. The goal is compliant, respectful outreach that actually reaches the people we're trying to help — not deception.

SECTION 02

A Note on Placeholder Fields

The <firstName> and <propertyAddress> fields in these templates are dynamic tokens that pull from your list data. They cannot be copy-pasted as text.

When entering a template into ReplySmart, you need to manually click the < button in the message editor and select the correct field from the dropdown (First Name, Property Address, etc.). Type your message, then click < at each spot you need to insert a variable.

DO NOT COPY-PASTE THE TOKENS

If you paste a placeholder as plain text, it will send exactly like that — "Hi <firstName>" — to every seller. That looks broken and will kill your delivery rates immediately.

SECTION 03

The Templates

Rotate these across your sends. Reusing one template at volume is itself a spam signal.
